Students from UNC Chapel Hill & University of California programs get up close and personal with Roos and Koala's at Currumbin Wildlife Sanctuary

Introduction

This program includes an excellent mix of Australian Sport, History & Culture. Students will learn from university professors from three different schools and benefit from a number of industry professionals at the academic various sites that we visit.

Australian Sport: To say that sport is a way of life in Australia is an enormous understatement! Such is the Australian population's devotion towards sport that it is sometimes humorously described as "Australia's national religion". The Aussie's truly enjoy a very rich sporting history & culture. Australian athletes have excelled in a range of sports globally, and their government supported system has a lot to do with this success. The Australian government spends the most money in the world per capita on elite athlete development and fittingly the Aussie's have led the three of the last four Summer Olympic Games in medals per capita. The Australian population also enjoys fabulous recreational facilities & programs for the non-elite as a part of the government philosophy of "Sport for All". It is commonplace throughout Australia for citizens to compete in some form of recreational sport for virtually their entire lives!!

Australian History: Aboriginal people are believed to have lived in Australia as early as 60,000 years ago and evidence of Aboriginal art can be traced back at least 30,000 years making the Aboriginal people one of the oldest surviving cultures on the planet! Australia has its origin as a penal colony, with the First Fleet of British convicts arriving in 1788 in Sydney. Stories of outlaws, or Bushrangers as they are known, have endured in Australian pop culture through music, cinema and literature with Ned Kelly being the most famous Bushranger of them all. The Australian gold rushes from the 1850s brought great wealth as well as new social tensions to Australia, including the miners' rebellion at the Eureka Stockade. Australian Federation in 1901 evidenced a growing sense of national identity as expressed in poetry by Banjo Paterson and Henry Lawson. The World Wars profoundly altered Australia's sense of identity - with World War I introducing ANZAC (Australian & New Zealand Army Corps), and World War II seeing a reorientation from Britain to the United States as a major ally. After the Second World War, 6.5 million migrants from 200 nations brought immense new diversity to a young country that was largely a white Anglo-Saxon society prior to the war.

Indigenous Australian's are the Oldest Surviving People on the Planet

Australian Culture: The culture of Australia is essentially a Western culture influenced by the unique environment and geography of the Australian continent and by the diverse cultural input of Aborigines, Torres Strait Islanders, and the various waves of multi-ethnic migration which followed the British colonization of Australia. At its core Australia is founded from Anglo-Celtic heritage including the English language, Christianity and a democratic system of government. However the Australia of today hosts a great diversity of cultural practices and pursuits, and has contributed many artists to international pop, cinema and classical culture, from opera's Dame Joan Sutherland to hard rock's AC/DC as well as movie stars such as Nicole Kidman, Russell Crowe, Hugh Jackman, Cate Blanchett, Mel Gibson, Eric Bana, Heath Ledger, Guy Pearce, Chris Hemsworth, Naomi Watts just to name a few.

Egalitarianism, informality and even irreverence have been common themes of Australian cultural commentary - exemplified by the works of C J Dennis, Barry Humphries and Paul Hogan. While fascination with the outback has persisted as a theme of Australian art, cinema and literature, and agriculture has been an important economic sector, the demographics of Australia show it to be one of the most urbanized populations in the world, with more than 75% of people living an urban city lifestyle.

Sports Travel Academy provides an exceptional Australia program for students to be immersed in educational and cultural experiences. Students have the opportunity to develop global perspectives about the sport and sport medicine industry as well as learn about the country's fascinating history & culture. Opportunities like this are an added value to university education and a terrific life-long experience for all participants."

ECU Faculty Leader

Stacy Warner, Ph.D.
Professor, East Carolina University
Sport Management / Sport Studies
WarnerS@ECU.EDU

Dr. Stacy Warner is an Associate Professor of Sport Management at East Carolina University. Dr. Warner earned her Master's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and her Ph.D. at the University of Texas at Austin. Her research interests are primarily focused on the roles that sport and sport culture play in the lives of individuals through families, communities, work environments, and social networks. In addition to her academic background, Dr. Warner has acquired work experience in many facets of the sports industry, including positions within the United States Olympic Committee, NCAA headquarters, NCAA (Divisions I, II, and III) athletics departments, campus recreation programs, Upward Sports Christian youth leagues, and various large-scale sporting events, such as the NCAA Final Four and the Special Olympic World Games. She often utilizes these first-hand experiences to challenge students to critically examine sport and consider the positive impact it can have on the quality of life for a variety of individuals if it is appropriately managed.

Australia in summer 2021 will be Dr. Warner's eighth trip with Sports Travel Academy. "Sports Travel Academy has provided many students with a great opportunity to learn and grow. I'm always impressed with how much students can gain by traveling abroad. The world is truly a classroom, and students take more away from a study abroad trip than just an understanding of another culture. Not only are they better prepared to compete and succeed in a global economy, but they walk away with wonderful memories, greater self-awareness, and friendships that will serve them well beyond graduation." - Dr. Stacy Warner

He proved to be not only knowledgeable about sport in Australia but also about the best options for shopping, dining, and touring all the country. His familiarity with the many and varied sport venues contributed greatly to the educational experience.
